Hemp Market Impact Nationwide

The hemp-derived cannabinoid market in the United States generates about $28,346,313,364 annually and supports roughly 328,067 jobs across all 50 states. The newly passed federal law could wipe out up to 95% of this market—threatening more than 311,663 jobs and over $26.9 billion in revenue.

Congress has passed a federal spending bill that redefines hemp by capping total THC (Delta-9 + THCA) at 0.3%, banning any hemp-derived cannabinoids that are synthesized or manufactured outside the plant, and limiting THC/THCA to 0.4 mg per package. These restrictions will outlaw most hemp products—including many non-intoxicating CBD products and full-spectrum CBD oil.

The bill includes a one-year grace period before these changes take effect, meaning the ban would go into force on January 1, 2026. Without immediate action, our industry and consumer access will be devastated.

Call to Action: Contact your members of Congress today. Tell them to remove the hemp-ban language from the spending bill and support smart regulation that protects consumers while preserving jobs.
